Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1, 3, 11 and 13 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Objections

2. Claim 35 and 36 objected to because of the following informalities: Claims 35 and 36 are recited as being dependent on claims 29 and 30 respectively, however it appears to depend on claims 34 and 35 respectively. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claims 26-35 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Hassell et al. (US Pre Grant Pub. 2004/0128685)

With regards to claims 26, 29, 32 and 34 Hassell discloses a receiver comprising:

Receiving means (set top box 28) for receiving broadcast digital content and attributive information (program information, see [0035]);

Selecting means (remote control 40) for selecting digital content based upon the attributive information, see [0029];

Display means (television 36) for displaying a first listing of first digital content previously broadcast (see [0037], "digital storage" row in fig. 5b) and available for immediate reproduction by the receiver [0039]-[0041], and a second listing of second digital content not yet broadcast (see [0035], program listing in fig. 5b); the first listing of recorded programs are listed in a separate row labeled "digital storage" and therefore visually distinguishable from the second listing (see fig. 5, and [0037]); and

Control means (control circuitry 42, see [0025]) for immediately reproducing on the receiver the first digital content selected from the first listing (see [0040]) and for automatically recording on the receiver second digital content selected from the second listing when the second digital content is broadcast (see [0041]-[0042]).

With further regards to claim 34, the receiver is located remotely from a television facility (see [0018])

With regards to claims 28, and 31, the first listing and the second listing are displayed at the same time, as illustrated in fig. 5b of Hassell.

With regards to claims 27, 30, 33 and 35, the system further comprises removable recordable medium means (see [0008]) configured to store address information (volume names, etc. for identifying location of media, see [0085]-[0086]) of broadcast digital content and client identification (user information stored in user fields, see [0045]).

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 36 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hassell et al. (US Pre Grant Pub. 2004/0128685).

With regards to claim 36, Hassell discloses the step of a user storing programs to another digital storage device (see [0084]). Hassell further discloses that when a user selects a program currently not loaded in the storage device, the program guide automatically changes the storage medium for playing back the requested program (see [0089]). Hassell therefore teaches without automatically receiving and playing user media (once the storage medium is loaded) based on address information of digital content and client identification stored on the address information of digital content.

Hassell is silent on the step of providing the removable recording medium to a second receiver and automatically playing the content at the second receiver. Examiner takes Official Notice that it is well known to use removable recording medium at a second receiver, so that contents of the recording medium maybe viewed at the second receiver. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to modify the system of Hassell by utilizing the removable recording medium at a jukebox of a second receiver, thereby enabling playback of stored contents at the second receiver.

Conclusion

7. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
